
Sava appoints Dr Neil Cutland as Consultancy Director

Dr Neil Cutland has joined Sava as their new Consultancy Director to support the growth of their consultancy offering.

Neil has spent his whole career engaged with the low-energy buildings agenda, starting with the pioneering work of Milton Keynes Development Corporation in the early 1990s when he also became one of the authors of the original SAP specification. He has vast experience in consultancy in the built environment, having previously held senior roles at BRE and Inbuilt. For the last 12 years, Neil has been running Cutland Consulting Limited.

Sava has seen significant growth in demand for technical consultancy and will soon be offering additional services that will help housing providers achieve their zero carbon aspirations. Neil will work closely with the technical team on the shared objective of making buildings better.

Commenting on his appointment as Consultancy Director, Neil said "I'm excited to be joining Sava at such a pivotal time, with so many housing providers now declaring their low- and zero-carbon intentions. It's going to be a lot of fun working with Sava to help the housing providers formulate their detailed strategies, at the same time as broadening the Sava offering to include further aspects of sustainability".
